Let's Start!

Let's analyze the company's abilities.

Learning Outcome

Accurately use important information about people's jobs and places of work in communicative situations.

Ask your partner:

- What do you consider as your strength when it comes to your work?
- What would you change about your work process? Why?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about jobs and work.
- I can make and respond to suggestions.
- I can talk about a possible future situation and its results.

Let's Explore!

Miranda introduces the opportunities and threats faced by Polygon.

* "Threats" are anything that could cause trouble.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Janet: Miranda, did you get hold of the SWOT Peter wrote?
- Miranda: Yes, I've reviewed it and I'd like to suggest making some changes that would better our chances of becoming their PR representative.
- Janet: That would be great. I understand that Farmani would like us to send a proposal discussing how we would market and sell their new clothing line. Our main competition are the Garcia Partners.
- Miranda: The way I see it, we have more marketing experience but Garcia has the cultural advantage with their staff. I'm figuring our staff could do with some briefing in Latin American culture.
- Janet: I agree. If we use the resources we have more effectively, we will rise to the challenge.
- Miranda: Exactly. I know that we will succeed if we take the right approach. Why don't we recognize some of the roles our team members hold? I'm thinking particularly of Ferdinand, Renando and Renata.
- Janet: That's a good idea. I am confident we are going to overcome our challenges if we watch our expenses. Ferdinand may need some advice there.
- Miranda: Point taken. A properly funded business will succeed if it keeps track of its expenses. You know, the market in South America is increasingly investing in clothing, which is bringing in many new clients. Ferdinand's people skills are outstanding, but he should be partnered with someone more careful financially.

Language for Making and Responding to Suggestions

In the business world, at times, you have an idea, a suggestion or plan that you think could work for your company. It is important to use proper language to offer those ideas for someone to consider. Here is some language you can use for making and responding to recommendations.

Making Suggestions	Responding to Suggestions
You could ... * You might want to ... * If I were you, I'd ... * It's generally best / a good idea to ... * One idea is to ... * I'd like to suggest / recommend ... * Why don't we ... ? * These expressions are followed by a bare infinitive (verb without 'to') In my experience, ...  works really well. Have you tried ... ?   These expressions are followed by a noun or -ing form.	That's not a bad idea. I agree. I like the sound of that. That's a good idea. This sounds great. That would be great.

NOTE: It is important to use the word 'suggest' correctly when speaking. The word 'suggest' is never followed by an infinitive. We use the pattern "suggest doing something".

✗ Janet ~~suggested to make~~ changes to the proposal.

✓ Janet suggested making changes to the proposal.

Examples:

- I'd like to suggest making changes that would increase our chances of winning this bid.
- That would be great.
- Our staff could do with some cultural awareness training.
- Why don't we rearrange some of our current members?

If Clauses (first conditional)

When we want to express real or very possible future situations and their results, we use an "if clause".

A conditional clause is made up of two clauses: A condition clause and a result clause. Here's how we structure a conditional clause:

Condition clause	Result clause
If + subject + verb (Simple Present)	subject + will / be going to + verb (Simple Present)

NOTE: You can flip the two clauses so that the result comes first.

Examples:

- If we use the resources we have more effectively, we will rise to the challenge.
- Our business will succeed if we keep an eye on our spending.
- If we make the right move, we are going to be successful.
